

THE CENTRAL RECORD.

THIRTY-FIRST YEAR

LANCASTER, KY., THURSDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 8, 1920.

NUMBER 16.

EX-SERVICE MEN

Have Big Day At Stanford.

The Heidal Sanford Post of the American Legion were guests last Monday of the Caswell Saufley Post at Stanford and all report a very happy and enjoyable day. All being loud in their praise of the courtesy extended them by the citizens of Stanford and the members of the Caswell Saufley Post in particular.

Practically every member of the local Post took advantage of the invitation and went over in autos, Commander Billy E. Miller being in charge, in the absence of Commander Virgil Kinnard who was unable to attend.

Upon reaching the city limits of Stanford a line of march was formed, headed by Scouts Roger Bourland and J. R. Haselden, Jr., then the Lancaster band followed by the colors carried by George Swinebroad representing the Army and guarded by Story Herron representing the Marines and Russell Sanford representing the Navy, followed by about seventy-five ex-service men from the Heidal Sanford Post. They were given a hearty welcome by attorney W. H. W. Reynolds dressed as "Uncle Sam." Band concerts were given by the Lancaster Band and the Brodhead Band.

The program was held at the Chautauqua tent where Judge Gregory of Louisville gave the principal address. A short address was made by Billie Miller and reading by Miss Burch of Stanford.

The races were pulled off on main street and proved quite interesting and at times exciting. Several of our local boys were right up in front, Mr. Thomas K. Price of this county winning the 100 yard dash over several excellent competitors.

A ball game closed the exercises for the day, finishing up with the fire works that evening.

Every member of Post to a man, express themselves as being highly entertained and say it was one of the biggest days they have spent since their return home from the service.

Ice Cream Supper.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Hubble Christian church will give an Ice Cream supper, Saturday night, June 10th. Everybody cordially invited.

Davis At Bryantsville.

Hon. George T. Davis, democratic candidate for Congress, will address the citizens of Garrard County at Bryantsville next Saturday afternoon, July 10th, at three o'clock. Ladies are especially invited.

Littrell.

Mr. James Littrell, aged 88 years, and one of the oldest and well known citizens of the county, died at his home on the Poor Ridge pike last Friday night, of infirmities incident to old age. He was a member of the Baptist church and the funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. C. D. Strother, last Sunday afternoon, the burial taking place in the Lancaster cemetery.

Christian Church News.

The County Convention of the Christian Sunday Schools will be held at Pleasant Grove on July 16. An interesting program has been arranged and a large attendance is expected.

Temptation. A Synonym for Opportunity will be the subject of the sermon at the Christian church next Sunday morning. No evening services, except the Endeavor Meeting at 6:45, will be held. Instead, the members of the congregation will join in the Union services at the Presbyterian church.

Automobile Owners Attention.

We are prepared now to take care of your automobile repair work on all cars.

If you want service and guaranteed satisfaction this is the place to come.

We are willing to stand behind any and all work turned out by us. If you are not satisfied we will refund your money or make the job right either you prefer.

Let us have a trial at something that some one else has failed to do to your satisfaction.

We are here to do as we say, and only ask a trial of you.

GOVERNOR COX

Nominated On 44th Ballot.

ROOSEVELT HIS RUNNING MATE

James M. Cox, three times governor of Ohio, was nominated for the Presidency early Wednesday morning by the Democratic national convention in the breakup of one of the most prolonged deadlocks in the history of national political parties:

It took forty-four ballots to make the choice and it was not until the thirty-eighth, when Attorney General Palmer withdrew from the race, that the long succession of roll calls showed any definite trend.

In the turnover of the Palmer delegates, Cox gained the advantage over William G. McAdoo, his rival for the place since early in the balloting and that advantage never was lost.

JAMES M. COX, OHIO

Supporters of Governor Cox won a way to the nomination of persistent battering at the McAdoo and Palmer forces in many states throughout a long series of shiftings and rallies which left now one and then another of the candidates in the lead.

Once A Printer's Devil.

James Middleton Cox was three times Governor of Ohio—an honor enjoyed by only one other Ohioan, Rutherford B. Hayes.

Born on a farm, educated in the public schools, a printer's devil, a school teacher, a newspaper reporter, a private secretary to a Congressman, owner, manager and proprietor of two newspapers, member of Congress for three years and three times Governor of his State is his record to date.

Business success paralleled his political achievements and through his own efforts Mr. Cox has amassed a fortune. He became the leader of the Democratic party in Ohio in 1912 when he was nominated for Governor. As one who had bought radical changes in the State Constitution, he took the field in its behalf. His first term as Governor was devoted chiefly to forwarding the enactment of laws to put the new State Constitution into effect.

But Ohio evidently was not prepared to assimilate all the new laws, for Mr. Cox was defeated for re-election. But his party renominated him in 1916 and he was re-elected for a third term in 1918, being the only Democrat to win in Ohio.

APPLE BUYERS KNOW CHARACTERISTICS AND USES OF THE SEVERAL VARIETIES

It Pays to Buy Apples by the Barrel If You Have a Place to Store Them.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Different varieties of apples have pomological Bertillon marks that serve as identification guides to the initiated.

Those who "know" apples understand that in many cases an unattractive skin covers flesh of most delicious flavor, while on the other hand many a fair appearing apple leaves the consumer with the conviction that he does not like apples as well as he used to.

Buying an apple because its skin is red or because it appears attractive—if you don't know any more about it than that—is like buying a pig in a poke. A rosy apple may taste as good as it looks, but it is quite as apt not to do so. Persons not familiar with the qualities of the different varieties of apples are wise, when buying in quantity, to stick to standard sorts. The characteristics of a few of the leading varieties are given as follows:

Ben Davis Leads in Quantity.

From the standpoint of quantity the most important apple to be found on the market is the Ben Davis. It is a good-sized apple, very attractive in appearance, being so heavily striped with red in well-grown specimens, as to make a nearly solid red color on the exposed side. It is notoriously lacking in eating quality but when used for cooking purposes it has considerable merit. Because of its good keeping and shipping qualities it is one of the most widely known of the winter varieties.

The Jonathan is one of the best and one of the most common varieties of apples in season during the fall months and which are excellent for eating uncooked. The Jonathan is a medium-sized red apple and rather small for culinary purposes, but it is seldom used in this way because of its choice dessert qualities.

The Grimes, or Grimes Golden, as it is commonly called, is another fall apple that has a season extending about to the 1st of January. It is commonly used as an eating apple because of its specially fine flavor and other dessert qualities. It is a medium-sized golden yellow apple and should not be held much later than the holidays, because it is apt to develop "apple scald," a storage trouble to which this variety is susceptible, if it is held too long.

One of the best known apples for culinary purposes, although it possesses dessert qualities as well, is the Rhode Island Greening. This is a greenish yellow apple of fairly large size. Some of the apples have a reddish blush on the exposed sides. The Greening possesses good keeping qualities and is primarily a winter apple.

Baldwin Important Commercially.

The most important commercial winter variety grown in the northern apple districts is the Baldwin. It is a solid red apple in well-colored specimens, and is one of the most important long-keeping general-purpose varieties. While not possessing some of the sprightly flavor of some of the dessert varieties, it yet has a wide use for eating as well as culinary purposes.

The Yellow Newton or Albemarle Pippin is a winter dessert apple of yellowish-green color. The crisp, juicy texture of the apple and its very high flavor make this sort particularly prized for eating purposes during the winter months. The Yellow Newton possesses good cooking qualities, but the relatively high price at which it frequently is sold makes it a dessert rather than a cooking apple.

The Winesap and Stayman Winesap are important varieties widely grown in different parts of the country. The Stayman Winesap is a good-sized, red-striped to nearly solid red apple which possesses excellent keeping qualities and is of much importance both for dessert purposes and for cooking. The Winesap has excellent dessert qualities and is regarded as one of the best general purpose apples on the market, although a little small for an ideal cooking apple.

Northern Spy is Popular.

One of the staple varieties of apples grown principally in the northern apple districts is the Northern Spy. It is of good size and one of the choicest of the dessert apples because of its crisp texture and spicy flavor. It is

FIRE PROTECTION ON FARM OF IMPORTANCE

Blazes Are Started in Several Different Ways.

Grave Menace Lies in Improper Handling and Storage of Gasoline—
Pail of Water Is Oldest and Cheapest Extinguisher.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

These are the days when the fire hazard is considerably increased over what it was in the summer months. With the coming of cool weather, quick fires are started in the stoves or furnace and often a fire is discovered that needs repair. Accumulations of inflammable rubbish in which a bad blaze may be started should be got rid of. Matches are used in increased numbers in winter, and that means additional chances of accidental fires. Kerosene is employed in greater quantities, being used for starting fires and for the lamps, and, therefore, this hazard is increased. An even graver menace lies in the improper handling of gasoline. It is highly important that every precaution be taken to store the gasoline supply in properly located and constructed reservoirs.

This is the season also for the farmer to look to his fire-fighting equipment. A pail of water is the oldest, simplest and cheapest of fire extinguishers. There is no reason why pails of water, to be used only in case of fire, should not be installed in every farm building. If possible they should be painted a special color, preferably red, or labeled so as to be conspicuous and less subject to unauthorized use.

The chemical extinguisher has come into quite general use on automobiles and elsewhere about the farm, and has many advantages over the water bucket. It can be employed, for example, in subduing fires among oils where water is of no value. In the absence of a chemical extinguisher, sand is serviceable in extinguishing burning oil in case of a small fire on the floor or in a shallow container. Sawdust is also effective in putting out oil fires. If it is scattered over the entire surface of the burning liquid so as to smother the flames. The United States department of agriculture has issued a Farmers' Bulletin 904, "Fire Prevention and Fire Fighting on the Farm," which discusses the various types of fire extinguishers and their merits. It may be had free by addressing the department.

CATTLE HARVEST CORN CROP

Plan Succeeds Very Well When Hogs
Are Sent in to Clean Up What Cattle Have Left.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The use of cattle for harvesting corn succeeds very well if hogs are later turned in to clean up what the cattle may have left on the ground. Cattle may be used thus almost as successfully as sheep or hogs.

2-First Glass Farms-2 540 ACRES THE FORESTUS REID LAND IN LINCOLN COUNTY THURSDAY, JULY 22nd

10 O'CLOCK A. M.

One farm of 300 acres, known as the John Hays farm, and the other farm of 240 acres, known as the Will Hays farm. Adjoins the lands of S. C. Harris and J. B. Paxton.

Two miles from Stanford, on the Hustonville pike.

This is the soil which has made Kentucky famous, Limestone soil with Red Clay sub-soil. Here is land that has never been on the market. Sugar tree and walnut land, lots of black locusts.

A LOT OF VIRGIN BLUE GRASS SOD. No one has ever offered this land for sale and it took me some time to get Mr. Reid to agree to let me sell it. Here is one of the good ones. This is the kind I like to sell, as somebody is sure to want it.

The 300 acre farm is on the South side of the Hustonville pike, has two sets of improvements. 2 six room dwellings with halls and porches, cistern at each dwelling. Stock barn and tobacco barn, watered by springs and ponds. In a high state of cultivation. Fencing good. 45 acres in corn, 3 acres tobacco, 50 acres in grain sown to grass, 30 acres in barley, balance of the farm in grass.

The 240 acre farm is on the North side of the Hustonville pike and has a splendid two story 8 room dwelling with double hall and porches, splendid cellar. Beautiful yard with large shade trees. 1 stock barn, 1 stock and tobacco barn, and other out buildings, divided into convenient fields and splendidly watered. 7 acres in tobacco, 50 acres in wheat and oats, balance in grass.

These two farms are level and gently rolling, all the land can be cultivated, and there is no waste land.

Each farm has a long frontage on the Hustonville Pike, also on the McCormack Church Pike, and both farms will be subdivided and sold in separate tracts from 25 to 125 acres each. But the division will be so that I can sell you just the number of acres you want. Remember Swinebroad "ALWAYS SELLS" and sells to suit the bidders. Will sell it the way you want to bid on it. Will be up and selling to the "High Dollar" and no by bids and no fake sales. All I ask is for you to look over this land, attend the sale and you name the price.

NEW-FANGLED

By GERTRUDE ARMSTRONG

(© 1920, by McClure's Newspaper Syndicate)

"No, Maggie, there hasn't going to be no telephone. Got something else to spend my money for. Just 'cause Sarah and Fred has got such new-fangled notions into their heads, suppose you got to have the same. We've lived here all these years, and my folks before me, and never had any of these fool ideas until your sister started. Guess you'll be wanting an automobile next."

"Well, never mind," replied his wife weekly. "I just thought 'twould be kind of handy in case of sickness, living a mile from our neighbors, and I get lonesome sometimes, and could talk to Sarah."

Her husband made no reply, but went about the evening chores. 'Twas so unlike Martha to ask him to waste money on anything so foolish. Handy, indeed! There was old Molly, whenever she wanted to visit and to run into town, who would take her in less than an hour.

She so seldom asked for anything or complained that his conscience bothered him a little, and the look of disappointment on her face he found hard to get out of his thoughts.

Never mind, some time soon, when he got his work along, they would go into town for a holiday. She had been working pretty hard lately and probably needed a change.

And thus, like most of us, he soothed his conscience with promises of better doing in the future.

When he returned to the house Martha was just finishing her dishes.

"I guess I'll go right to bed, John," she said; "I don't feel very smart tonight."

"Well, I would," he replied, looking at her keenly. "And take something hot for that cold. I don't like the way it's hanging on. Been this way now for most a week." And he kissed her and patted her kindly.

It was two hours later when he opened their bedroom door. He tiptoed softly to the bed, where she lay, open-eyed and apparently awake.

"Looks like a storm," said John, and he crossed the room and carefully closed the window, muttering as he did so, "More new-fangled notions."

There was no response from the bed. What was the matter? 'Twas not at all like sweet-tempered Martha to hold a grudge. He bent over her and then started back. The staring eyes and burning face did not look familiar.

"Go and see if David is covered, John. It's chilly tonight," she gasped.

David! Their boy who had been dead five years. Then it burst upon him—she was delirious. What should he do?

Get a doctor, of course. If he could only get word to Sarah! And his heart sank as he thought of the precious time he would waste driving all those miles.

"Oh, God! what would I give for a telephone!" burst from his agonized lips.

He rushed out to the stable for old Molly, backed her from her stall, and harnessed. His hands seemed palsied. It was ages before he got started. Driving with all speed he came in sight of Sarah's. They were up; he could see the gleam of lights through the trees. Five minutes more, and with bursting heart he rushed in and told them his errand.

What was there for him in life, anyway, if she was unhappy?

She who had helped him save day by day, never complaining, always cheerful—when she had asked for a part of what was really hers she had been refused, he calling it a waste of money, when but for just such a "new-fangled notion" he would have lost the best little partner man ever had.

Many weeks after a handsome little runabout drove into the yard, from which alighted three men, carrying wires and tools.

"Here's your auto, Mr. Cobb. The telephone men were coming out this way so I drove them over. If there is anything wrong let us know. Be ever again by night. So long."

"Why, John, what does this mean?" asked Martha, when the men had started to work downstairs.

"It means that the men have been working for some time, and you're going to have that telephone, and if you don't like this here machine you're going to have another one, and pick it out yourself. They might be 'new-fangled notions' but they're darned good ones to have around a house."

And Martha smiled and thanked him as only she knew how.

Samoa National Drink

The national beverage of the Samoan islanders is "kava," obtained from the dried root of a plant known to the botanist as Piper methysticum, says the Kansas City Star. The classic method of its preparation was by chewing. Water was added, and, after straining, the stuff was ready to drink. Missionaries convinced the natives that this method did not accord with the best social customs, and so nowadays they grind the kava root in a stout mortar with a stone pestle. To any unaccustomed person kava tastes rather like soapuds, though some say it has a flavor of varnish. Many Americans, however, having acquired a liking for it, drink it by the gallon. But the native way of preparing it is too slow for them, and they prefer to use a meat grinder.

DISSOLVING PARTNERSHIP

Bright and Paxton's Splendid 235 Acre River Bottom Farm

(Formerly Owned by R. H. Bronaugh,) Subdivided.

All Farming Implements, 50 Head of Stock, 200 Barrels of Corn, Etc.

Public Auction
ON THE PREMISES

SATURDAY, JULY 17th

AT 10:30 A. M.

LOCATED:—Right at the edge of that thriving town of Crab Orchard with her fine schools, churches, stores, bank, famous Crab Orchard Springs, splendid citizenship and less than one mile from passenger depot and shipping station on L. and N. Part of this farm is within the city limits and is penetrated by a street which leads to the Graded High School.

Since W. M. Bright's death it has become necessary to wind up the partnership existing between him and J. B. Paxton. This farm is up for the "High Dollar" without reserve, by-bid or limit. AN ABSOLUTE SALE. The business must be wound up.

THE IMPROVEMENTS:—Old fashioned brick bungalow of 8 rooms, hall, two porches, good cellar, set on a beautiful lawn, with avenue leading from National Highway, "BOONE WAY." Tenant house of three rooms and all necessary outbuildings. Tobacco barn 36 x 100 ft. and 20 ft. to eaves, good stock barn, three corn cribs, large silo of 90 tons, hog houses, etc. Fine orchard. Place well fenced; excellent water, numerous everlasting farm springs and deep well.

All of this rich and fertile farm in grass except about 40 to 50 acres. The clover and timothy meadows and corn in the bottoms are wonderful to see. 150 acres of this farm is tile drained river bottom land on which was placed 20 carloads of drain tile—20 miles of it placed there by and under the expert engineering supervision of the best tile man in Kentucky, just at the beginning of the war before there was any advance in labor, material, and freight. This tile drained land is not affected by either dry or wet weather, having a porous soil to the depth of 15 to 30 feet. A crop rotation of oats, corn and clover is now being maintained and is producing wonderful results, and is becoming as fertile as the valley of the NILE.

This land is producing, and will continue to produce as much corn, clover etc as any lands in the corn belts of Indiana, Illinois and Iowa, where they sell at from $300 to $500. per acre. An opportunity to buy land like this only comes occasionally—do not let it slip.

The 83 acres in upland grows the finest quality of tobacco grown in Central Kentucky. Excellent crops from this land have frequently topped the Danville, Ky., market during the whole season.

This farm will produce larger dividends on the amount invested than any place we know of.

This is undoubtedly the biggest farm opportunity that has been offered in Central Kentucky this year. If you are in the market for a farm, we urge a personal inspection. If you see the land and the crops it produces, you will realize its wonderful value.

Mrs. W. M. Bright and J. B. Paxton say SELL. You know what this means. YOU say what it is worth and take the farm. We merely suggest the terms and look after the details of the sale etc. Terms exceedingly liberal and made known on day of sale. DON'T LET THIS OPPORTUNITY PASS YOU BY.

The personality belonging to Mrs. W. M. Bright and Messrs. J. B. Paxton and James Messer consists of a world of farming tools and implements necessary to run a 600 acre farm, two large cribs of corn containing from 175 to 200 barrels of corn, 50 head of stock of mules, horses, cattle etc.

REMEMBER THE DAY AND HOUR SATURDAY JULY 17th AT 10:30 A. M. Be on hands promptly.

Mr. James Messer on the place will take pleasure in showing the farm to prospective purchasers. Dinner on the grounds.

For full particulars, blue prints etc, see, write or phone either Mrs. W. M. Bright, or J. B. Paxton, Stanford, Ky., or

NEIGHBORS

By LOTTIE W. SIMMONS.

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"There! I need raisins for this pudding and, come to think, I'm all out," declared Myra Higgins in a vexed tone as she vigorously stirred the contents of a huge yellow bowl.

Jake Higgins looked up from the newspaper he was reading.

"I'll go over to Julia's and borrow a cupful," he offered.

A dull red stained Myra's cheeks. She glanced angrily at the good-looking middle-aged man who had spoken, and a great desire came over her to shake him.

"You stay away from Julia's," she snapped. "You go there too much already. Don't you know, Jake, the whole town is talking about you and Julia Martin?"

"Oh, Lord! Myra, don't begin that," replied Jake.

"Occasionally!" mimicked Myra. "Jake, you make me sick! You've been in there twice this morning, already. How many times yesterday, and the day before, and the day before that? Why don't you pack your trunk and move over? As for Tom Martin, he hasn't the gumption of a sick chicken. He starts something! You could jug his wife off under his very eyes and he'd be as resigned as a dead lamb. Neighbors, indeed! How about Laura Fickett? Called on her lately? She's a neighbor."

"Look here!" blazed Jake, "you know as well as I that I stopped calling on Laura 20 years ago."

"I know you did," was the hot retort, "and it's high time now that you paid her a call! Here," grabbing up a cup, "you take this and ask Laura to let me have a cupful of raisins till Wednesday."

"Well, I guess not!" exploded Jake, jumping to his feet and thrusting out his stubborn chin.

"All right, Jake Higgins." Myra's voice dropped to zero. "Just because I'm your sister I've stayed here and kept house for you—stayed when you know I've almost died for the city and the work I wanted to do there. But at last I'm going—that is, unless you want to run over to Laura's and bring me a cupful of raisins."

"D—!" Jake gritted between his teeth; and as he straightened his necktie he was duly conscious of the fact that his safety razor had done good work that morning, the only trace of a strong beard being a bluish shade about his square chin. A queer little sensation began to play about his heart. Thoughts flew thick and fast. Fate was leading him back to Laura!

He recalled what a sweet little thing she had been—long yellow curlies, cheeks as red as the bright side of an astrachan apple, big eyes and a dimple brought often to play by means of a crinkly little smile. Let's see—Laura would be forty in June. Lord! How time did fly!

As usual it was a foolish thing they had quarreled over.

Nobody saw the hand of fate when Tom Martin and his wife came back after years of wandering and rented the Bromley place.

They had all been playmates together, Tom and Julia, Jake and Laura, and Myra.

At sight of Jake's retreating back Myra's face relaxed and she smiled.

A couple of moments later Julia Martin appeared at the back door.

"My clothesline is caught, Myra. I can't get it either one way or the other. I thought maybe Jake—"

"He isn't here," interrupted Myra coldly, "but come in; I want to ask you something. Why don't you tell Jake to keep away from your house? Do you realize that he is costing you your good reputation?"

Julia eyed her friend very serenely for a guilty woman.

"What the gossips say can't do me any real harm, Myra," she replied gently. "We'll soon be leaving—Tom can't stay in one place long, you know, but Laura will be here all her life, and Jake—here in this little town where they were born—and they might as well be happy. And you, Myra, you want your chance, don't you? If you are the old Myra, with the old ambitions, you certainly do."

Myra was puzzled.

"I don't know what you are driving at," she said.

"What do you suppose Jake and I talk about when he comes in?" she asked with a bright smile. "I'll tell you—one topic always—Laura. That's why he comes. He loves her, of course—he's always loved her, and he likes to talk about her, or hear me talk, I should say. Haven't I almost worn out the English language raving about her yellow hair, her crinkly smile, her dimple, her superiority, her tender heart, her goodness, and still that man isn't satisfied? It's like pouring water into a jug with a hole in it.

And, Myra, can't you foresee the result? He's going to march over there some day—little by little I've been melting his pride—and then what should have happened 20 years ago will happen then."

"Oh, Julia," almost whispered Myra, "she's over there now; I sent him—no, I didn't! It's you! If it hadn't been for you—God bless you, Julia."

Soon after that the wanderlust struck Tom Martin and he moved away to the next town. Shortly after his arrival a friend stopped him on the street with this remark:

"Heard about Jake Higgins, Tom? He married a neighbor of his last night."

FOR CONGRESS.

We are authorized to announce RALPH GILBERT, of Shelby county, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this, the Eighth Congressional District of Kentucky. State Primary Election, Saturday, August 7, 1920.

FOR CONGRESS.

We are authorized to announce COL. FRANK L. RIPPY, of Anderson county, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this, the Eighth Congressional District of Kentucky. State Primary Election, Saturday, August 7, 1920.

A GREAT TICKET.

Every democrat in the land should be pleased with the work of the convention at Frisco. James Middleton Cox, Governor of Ohio, for president, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, for Vice President, make the very strongest ticket that could have been selected. Not only a vote getting ticket but men pre-eminently qualified and fitted both by training and experience for the great tasks they would be expected to perform if selected in November. There is a marked contrast in this regard between the selected leaders of the two parties. Governor Cox, born and reared on a farm, a printer, newspaper editor, congressman for several terms, three times elected Governor of the great republican state of Ohio, furnishes to him the widest executive experience and prepares him for the duties of President. His fine executive poise has enabled him to so administer the affairs of Governor of Ohio to the eminent satisfaction of the people of that great state with its varied and diversified business interest, to the end that he is admitted by all to be the most popular governor in all the Union. The democrats

As The Editor Sees It.

Experts are telling us that the country will be short of coal this winter, because the mining companies can not get freight cars enough for shipping the coal to the distributing points.

Go into any big railroad yard in the country and you will see thousands and thousands of cars standing on side tracks, waiting to be unloaded. In numerous cases they have been standing many days, possibly weeks, yet no apparent attempt is being made to unload them. Even in small towns you will find cars standing day after day.

This condition is one great cause for the shortage in rail transportation. It is the reason why the mines are not putting more coal on the market. It is the reason why many people will freeze next winter if coal is not moved more rapidly.

It would be an easy matter to correct this disquieting condition of affairs.

The government could take one great railroad center as an example. It could send secret service operatives to that city to check up on the idle cars, and the cause for such idleness. An explanation could be demanded of the railroad company.

If the company could not give a legitimate reason, the officials should be punished—jailed if possible.

If not the fault of the company, and the consignee is responsible, he should be punished—jailed if possible. And if government officials whose duty it is to prosecute such offenders show an inclination to delay or evade the issue because some "prominent people" are involved, the president should remove them from office and otherwise punish them—jailed if possible.

One such shakeup as an example would be sufficient. Cars would begin to move everywhere, and would keep on moving.

And the people could keep warm next winter—which is doubtful under present conditions.

Think a little and you will call to mind some young lady whose sweetness of disposition is a marvel to her friends.

Part of that disposition is hereditary, but much of it is the result of environment and early training.

Some mothers have a rare talent in the training of children. They do not rule by threats and spanks, but from early childhood the pride of the little one is brought to the fore.

As early as it can understand, it is taught to be gentle and sweet, and to take pride in excelling in those womanly qualities which appeal so strongly to the human race.

As a child is taught in its infancy, so will it invariably be in maturity.

If all mothers would bear this fact constantly in mind, there would be more of that innate sweetness which is so charming in the female sex, and which appeals so strongly to manhood in all stations of life.

The king of Greece contracted a morganatic marriage with a charming lady not of the royal circle. His army officers and his government officials are much distressed thereat, and are endeavoring to induce the king to cast her off—toss her into discord—and marry some one of the blood royal.

If the young king is weak he will put a good wife behind him and cling to his tinsel crown. If he is half a man he will remain true to the woman he has married.

But kings as a rule are not quite half man, and the ultimate decision of young Alexander is problematical.

The old world does not possess a single crown that could compensate for the loss of the love and respect of a good woman.

Some day kings will have brains instead of vanity, or there will be no more kings.

MOTOR EXPRESS WILL AID TRANSPORTATION

Facilities for Hauling Farm Produce Are Lacking.

Solution of Problem Seen in Establishment of Rural Auto Truck Feeder Lines—Specially Designed Vehicles Used.

It has been asserted that 50 per cent of the perishable produce now grown on farms throughout the United States is wasted because proper facilities for hauling it to market are lacking. The loss to farmers, together with the economic loss to the whole nation due to this condition, reaches a tremendous total. It is further claimed the solution of this problem would go a long way to satisfactorily reduce the high cost of living. In a word it would give the farmer more money for his capital and work, but at the same time make the tariff easier on the ultimate consumer.

What is really needed is a branch feeder line to each farm.

Obviously the railroads can not build them. The electric roads help, but do not entirely fill the bill. There is, however, one method of transportation which, used in conjunction with either of the above mentioned utilities, happily solves the problem. It is the motor truck line.

Worthy while trucks on good roads form the important link in the farmers' transportation system which will bring about the state of affairs referred to.

Already progressive cities are installing freight terminals for truck lines. Motor express has proven to be a logical, economical and sure method of bringing the farm to market. These lines are run the same as any railroad and may either operate independently or in conjunction with a railroad.

An example of the latter class is found in the motor truck feeder lines of a Wisconsin-Illinois railway concern. About a year ago this company realized its express service was inadequate to care for its territory. They solved their problem by establishing rural motor express lines to take up the work where the interurban left off. Trucks specially designed for high-speed cross-country work were the vehicles selected for the work. They were equipped with bodies and trailers and put to work over certain routes. They easily proved their economical worth.

If a farmer has enough material going in, a trailer can be left at his farm. He can then load it and it will be picked up on the next trip. The trucks run on time table schedule, make two trips over their routes each day, deliver and pick up all kinds of shipments no matter how small or large. Shipments received anywhere in the system up to 6 p.m. are at their destination, which may be any other place covered by the lines, before noon of the following day.

From the time the first trucks were installed the popularity of the feeder lines was never in doubt. More business than they could possibly handle was quickly offered to them and the fleet has been expanding ever since. They offer a really dependable service which means money to the farmers served. The service has been in operation a year and the trucks have functioned all the time. Even the severest days of last winter did not cause a tie-up of shipments.

CARING FOR AILING ANIMALS

Whenever Tuberculosis Is Discovered Cow Should Be Separated From Healthy Cattle.

A cow infected with tuberculosis should be separated from healthy cattle as soon as the disease is discovered as, otherwise, she is constantly a medium for the transmission of the ailment to her mates. It is imperative that no newly purchased animals be introduced into a healthy herd until they have successfully passed a thorough tuberculin test administered by an experienced veterinarian.

European Flowers.

An authority on botany estimates that the number of species of flowers cultivated in Europe is 4,300, of which 420 possess an agreeable perfume. Odors are most likely to be found in flowers, having white or cream-colored petals, then yellow, red, blue or violet in order.

Church's History.

With much diversity of opinion on minor points, there is a general agreement in dividing the history of the church into three great periods. The first, from the birth of Christ to the time of Constantine; the second from that epoch to the Reformation, and third, from the Reformation to the present time.

BETTER CARE OF SHOES IS URGED

Footwear Requires Good Treatment to Preserve Quality and Neat Appearance.

PERSPIRATION ROTTS LINING

Good Economy to Keep Two Pairs and Wear Them on Alternate Days—

Thorough Airing on Shoe Trees Keeps Them Shapely.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When a pair of dress shoes could be bought for a five-dollar bill most people were not greatly concerned as to how long they would wear. But now nearly everybody is taking better care of his shoes in an endeavor to prolong their usefulness.

For those who are not "shoe-wise" the following advice on the care of shoes given by clothing specialists in the United States department of agriculture, may prove helpful.

Walk Right to Save Shoes.

Careful poise of the body in walking prolongs the life of shoes. A careless, slipshod gait wears shoes unevenly, while an erect carriage tends to keep the soles and heels level.

Shoes, even more than most other articles of clothing, need to be aired after wearing in order to prevent the perspiration from rotting the lining.

Miss Sally Noel, who suffered a stroke of paralysis three weeks ago, is reported as slightly improved today but is still in a very serious condition. Her many friends hope that she will be out of the critical stage in the next few days.—Danville Advocate.

GIVE CHILDREN MILK FOR NEEDED PROTEIN

It is Their Natural Food and the Best We Have.

Contains Lime and Other Salts Needed for Strong Bones and Teeth and for Body Regulators—

Vitamines Needed.

Milk is the natural food for children. It is the best food we have. A quart a day for every child if possible, and a pint without fail, should be forced out and the original shape is preserved.

Wetting tends to spoil the appearance of shoes and to shorten their period of service; therefore, overshoes should be worn in bad weather.

Wet shoes should be dried slowly and carefully, for heat tends to crack the leather. It is especially important to restore the shape of wet shoes by shoestrings or paper stuffing. Even with the most careful drying, moisture tends to rot the threads with which a shoe is sewn, and "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

All types of rubber overshoes are now so expensive that they should be treated as carefully as the shoes they protect. They should be kept from great heat, and set "right side up with care" to prevent their losing shape. They should also be washed or brushed so that the grit on them may not wear down the surface.

It is economy to keep two pairs of shoes in use and wear them on alternate days; thorough airing on shoe trees or stuffed with paper keeps them fresher and more shapely so that each pair gives longer service. All shoes should be kept clean and well brushed. Leather shoes may be rubbed with vaseline to keep them soft and also to keep moisture from passing quickly through the leather.

White canvas shoes are usually cleaned with a commercial preparation.

When a pair of dress shoes could be bought for a five-dollar bill most people were not greatly concerned as to how long they would wear. But now nearly everybody is taking better care of his shoes in an endeavor to prolong their usefulness.

For those who are not "shoe-wise" the following advice on the care of shoes given by clothing specialists in the United States department of agriculture, may prove helpful.

AS OTHERS SEE US

By HAZEL M. ROBINSON.
(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

As Elsie Heath entered the Wileroff ten room a spirit of peace and quiet seemed to surround her. Here, after a long, tiresome day, was peace for the weary mind and sore heart. No raucous blare of jazz jarred tired nerves, no loud laughter pierced the stillness. Even the serving was so quiet, hardly a dish was heard to rattle.

As she waited for her order to be brought, she was conscious of a familiar voice, coming apparently over the low partition between the booth she occupied and the next. It seemed incredible, yet that surely was Richard's voice. Yes, his companion spoke his name. Wonderingly, she began to eat the food placed before her, paying no attention to the conversation, until her own name was spoken.

"If it wasn't for Miss Heath, I'd like it immensely," said the girl.

"What's the matter with her, Miriam?" asked the man.

Why, surely, that was Miriam Brown, the new girl she had hired two weeks ago. As if in a trance, she sat and waited for the next word.

"She's worse than blue Monday—goes pussy-footing around the place, looking as though she had lost her last friend. Her eyes are sad. Never a smile or joke from her. Cross, if the least little thing goes wrong. The place has changed a lot in the last year, the girls all say."

Elsie continued eating mechanically, until her food was gone, then she deliberately set herself to eavesdropping.

"Plenty of talking and laughing in those days, but plenty of work done, too. Seemed like a jolly family of sisters, from all they say. Now, the girls are delighted when the 4:30 closing hour comes and they can get outside to do their talking and laughing."

Elsie seemed dazed, as one awaking from a trance. Mechanically she picked up her wraps, paid her bill and started homeward. Once in her room, the healing tears began to flow, and memory recalled the whole story.

Elsie Heath had opened an office as public stenographer five years ago. Her location was good and her careful attention to work soon brought her more than she could do alone. The business had grown until she employed four girls, while she tended only to receiving the patrons and doing the bookkeeping.

Richard Ferris had been among her first patrons. They became more than good friends, yet no closer ties were made before he left to serve his country. Just before he had left to come home he wrote declaring his love for her. For days and weeks after mailing her reply she sang at her work. Her laugh never was so ready, her jokes so many or witty, nor the place so gay.

Two months, then three, went by, and no word came from him. She read of his return in the papers. Each day she looked for him every time the door opened.

Then had begun the change Miriam had spoken of.

Elsie finally sat up, looked about her, and thought what a blessed thing it is to "see ourself as others see us." A card stuck in one corner of her mirror flashed out "Never too late to mend," and its twin from the other corner sent the message "Better late than never." She got up, patted her hair into place, bathed her flushed face and whisked a bit of powder over it and made a resolve. No man on earth was worth so many hot, bitter tears. Then, too, she had made her dear girls suffer in her bitterness. It was "up to her," and she'd play fair from now on.

She spent the rest of the evening searching the latest papers and magazines for new jokes.

Next morning she startled the girls by arriving one-half hour late, greeting them with an unusually cheery good morning, and then springing a joke on each of them. She noticed their puzzled, yet pleasant glances, as she passed into her small office, and for the rest of the morning joyousness filled every inch of the little room.

The girls were all busy on hurry orders, so Elsie slipped on a record and started the dictaphone, used only for such emergencies, as she did not like to use it. The door quietly opened and she looked into the smiling eyes of Richard Ferris.

No one knew just what happened until the next morning. Miriam, looking for more work, took a dictaphone record and heard this:

"One hundred copies circular for James & Smith to be ready tomorrow morning as follows—" "Dick!" "Elsie, girl, oh I my girl. And I never saw till last night just how selfish I have been. As soon as I received your wonderful letter, dear, I was impatient to come to you, but luck was against me. That old wound began to bother again, and after I got this—"

"Oh, Dick?" "Sure, but it's almost as good as the other, jointed and everything, and I always was right handed, you know. Well, after I got this, I couldn't just bear to come for your pity. But it took my kid cousin to show me my mistake. Can I ever make up for the hurt these months have brought you? I'll spend the rest of my life trying. Can you forgive me? Oh, you blessed est!"

Miriam sighed. "Giria, before I destroy this record, do just come and bear the most rapturous kiss!"

SIMPLE DIRECTIONS OUTLINED FOR MAKING VINEGAR AT HOME—USE ONLY RIPE FRUIT

Where Vinegar in Quantity is to Be Made, Use a Cider Mill.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Vinegar is one of the condiments which every good cook regards as a necessity on her pantry shelves. Used with discretion, food to which it is added will be transformed into a relish and will give zest to an otherwise insipid meal. Along with other groceries, vinegar has gone up in price since the great war, until in many parts of the country 50 to 60 cents a gallon is now the retail market price. The making of vinegar at home is a simple process and not many years ago was practiced by nearly every one who could obtain the necessary fruit juice. With the present high price of vinegar there has been a revival of this old household art. Those who have set up a vinegar keg or barrel, secure a superior product and at the same time beat old High Cost of Living.

Fruits for Making Vinegar.

Vinegar is usually made from apples, although grapes and oranges are also used to some extent. Certain other fruits, such as blackberries, figs, peaches, watermelons (after concentration of juice), sorghum and cane syrup have been used with good results. Many wild fruits, such as the blackberry, elderberry, and persimmon, which frequently are not completely or properly utilized, will make excellent vinegar. As a matter of fact, any wholesome fruit or vegetable juice can be used for vinegar making, provided it contains sufficient sugar. Some fruits, such as the guava or Kieffer pear, contain only five to eight per cent of sugar, which is not sufficient to make a strong, satisfactory vinegar.

Many fruit juices are turbid after fermentation, while others, particularly apple vinegar, may clarify themselves spontaneously. One of the simplest ways of filtration to use in the home manufacture of vinegar is to thoroughly mix about a teaspoonful of fuller's earth or animal charcoal with a quart of vinegar and filter through it.

It is a common practice with many people to make household vinegar from fruit parings and cores, cold tea, and even from the water in which potatoes or other vegetables are boiled. Sugar, of course, is added, just as in the case of fruit juices that do not contain sufficient sugar.

DETERMINE AGE OF CHICKEN

Good Method is to Grasp End of Breast Bone Between Thumb and Finger and Bend It.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A good method of determining the age of dressed fowls, according to specialists of the United States department of agriculture, is to grasp the end of the breast bone farthest from the head between the thumb and finger and attempt to bend it to one side. In a very young bird, such as a broiler chicken or a green goose, it will bend easily like the cartilage of the human ear. In a bird a year or so old, it will be brittle and, in an old bird, tough and hard to bend or break. Unscrupulous dealers sometimes break one end of the breast bone before showing the bird on the market, in order that the buyer will believe the bird to be a young one.

Start Fermentation.

After the juice has been squeezed out add a fresh yeast cake to every five gallons of juice. A good fermentation often results from chance inoculation with the wild yeast of the air. This is the method ordinarily followed in making cider vinegar. Experiments have shown, however, that a much stronger vinegar can be made by using yeast to start the fermentation. Work the yeast up thoroughly in about one-half cupful of the juice and add to the expressed juice, stirring thoroughly. Cover with a cloth to keep insects from it and allow to ferment. The best temperature for fermentation is between 80 and 90 degrees. Do not put in a cold cellar or the fermentation will be too slow. At 80 to 90 degrees alcoholic fermentation will usually be complete in from three to four days to a week, or when "working" starts, as indicated by the cessation of bubbling. The next step in the process is acetic acid fermentation, during which the alcohol is changed into acetic acid.

After the bubbling stops it will be found advantageous to add some good strong vinegar in the proportion of one gallon of vinegar to three or four gallons of fermented juice. Usually, however, no vinegar is added and the inoculation of the fermented juice with acetic acid bacteria is left to chance. This chance inoculation generally produces a more or less satisfactory product, but if the vinegar is added, the results are much better. Instead of vinegar one may add a good quantity of so-called "mother." If "mother" is used, however, use only that growing in the surface of the vinegar. Vinegar

RECIPE FOR COTTAGE CHEESE

Housewives Becoming Familiar With Value of Excellent Substitute for Meat

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Both city and country housewives have become familiar with the value of cottage cheese as a meat substitute. If your family is tired of your old recipes, in which the cheese is an ingredient, why not try some new, approved ones? "Cottage Cheese and Its Uses," Office of the Secretary, Circular 109, issued by the department of agriculture, will be sent to anyone who writes for it.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

All meals possible should be served on the porch or under a tree.

Plan the housework so it can be done in the cool of the morning.

Keeping the baby cool and quiet is one preventive of digestive troubles.

Canned cherries and strawberries are quite as good for pie as the fresh fruit.

A garment may be much improved if worn buttonholes are worked over neatly.

Nuts Grown in United States.

About the only nuts that have been so far raised in this country on a large scale are the English walnut and the almond, the former mainly in southern California, the latter in central California, also the pecan in the southern states. The culture of the pecan has of late become an important and exceedingly profitable industry in the South.

Eucalyptus Trees.

The grand eucalyptus trees in Gippsland are probably the grandest of their kind in the world, and quite as magnificent as the Californian giants, only not so large in circumference. The shedding of their bark is a misstatement. What the tree does do is this: it sheds the old, dry, broken, and coarse bark, but the new one is sound and solid, and is not shed. The new bark is clean and very smooth, no branches growing for 100 feet or more.

Scapa Flow.

In Scotch the word scapa means "head" and flow means "sea." Scapa flow is the portion of the sea in the southern part of the Orkney Islands which extends from Pormona to the Pentland firth. It is fifteen miles long and about eight miles wide, and opens by Hoy sound in the northwest joining Pentland firth in the south near the island of Swona. The term scapa may perhaps be traced to the Gaelic sgapadh, to scatter, spread.

Old Pennsylvania City.

York, Pa., is a city of ancient origin. Here was located the first settlement west of the Susquehanna river. From September 30, 1777, to June 27, 1778, she was the nation's capital, for during that time, the British then occupying Philadelphia, the continental congress met in her courthouse. The first money sent by the king of France to aid the cause of American independence was received by congress in this city. And here the first national Thanksgiving proclamation was issued.

Filbert Worth Cultivating.

A nut almost unknown in the United States is the filbert, one of the most delicious of all nuts. It is cultivated on a large scale for the market in the county of Kent, England. A larger variety is known as the "cob nut." The filbert is as superior to the hazel nut—of which family it is a member—as the hazel nut is superior to the peanut. Attempts to raise the filbert on a commercial scale in the United States have not so far met with success.

Virtue in Paying Debts.
Paying of debts is, next to the grace of God, the best means in the world to deliver you from a thousand temptations to sin and vanity.—Delaney.

Genius Always Envied.
Such is the destiny of great men that their superior genius always exposes them to be the butt of the envenomed darts of calumny and envy.—Voltaire.

Wanted Full Information.
Johnnie's father was ill in a distant city and Johnnie asked his mother who was taking care of him. She replied: "Oh, he has two nurses." After much thought, he said: "Are they mans?"

Kindheartedness.
The thing that Si Simlin's mule died of was kindheartedness. Si couldn't stand it to see anybody walk, so he kep' the wagon loaded so heavy that the poor old creature got too feeble to kick and passed away.—Exchange.

Another Paradox.
A painful mistake is reported from North London. It appears that a young lady who went to a fancy dress ball as "The Silent Wife" was awarded the first prize for her clever impersonation of a telephone girl.—Punch, London.

Why Despotism Irks.
We bow to the government of God, but we turn against the despot. No man likes to share in the shipwreck of a vessel in which he has been embarked by violence, and which has been steered contrary to his wish and opinion.—Amiel.

Healthy Place to Live.
The air of Lower California is dry and pure and the atmosphere, except on the western coast, is marvelously clear. The narrowness of the peninsula, giving to the atmosphere a touch of the bracing air of the sea, and the dryness of the land combine to give the air an intense purity. There is probably no more healthful climate in the world than that of Lower California.

Illuminating Irritation.
Ida incidentally indicates interest in Ices, Irving, impressionable, infatuated, injudiciously invests. Ida's indulgence in Ices inordinate, insatiable. Irving, impetuous, inaptly introduces inexpensive innovations. Ida, instantaneously, in impatience irritation, indignant, impeaches Irving's iterated infatuation, insinuating indifference, inurbancy. Ida's infantile, inelegant inventive illuminates Irving's innermost intelligence, inhibiting infatuation, intercepting intentions.—Youth's Companion.

Purity of Mind.
You can no more filter your mind into purity than you can compress it into calmness; you must keep it pure, and throw no stones into it, if you would have it quiet.—Ruskin.

Rather Slim Excuse.
Celia and Bobby disagreed, whereupon Celia slapped her brother. A wall brought their mother. Only after a long and severe reproof did the small girl's spirit melt and then she said: "Oh mamma, I'm sorry I slapped him. I didn't mean to. My hand slipped."

To Clean Brass Articles.
Do not throw away squeezed lemons; use them for cleaning brasses and dish covers. Put a pinch of whitening on the article to be cleaned, and rub it in well, using the lemon as a sponge. You will be surprised to see how much dirt you can remove in a very short time and with little trouble. Brasses cleaned in this way keep longer than when done with ordinary polish.

Lower California Cattle.
In addition to cattle, many excellent mules are raised in Lower California. Horses are rarely used. The faithful burro is the principal means of transportation. Except for a few thousand in La Frontera, there are no domestic sheep in the country. In the southern part there are numerous flocks of goats. The largest cattle ranch on the peninsula comprises almost 1,000,000 acres.

Tin Miners Have Privileges.
The men who work in the Cornish tin mines are a class by themselves, and all their differences are adjusted by the stannary courts, as they are called from the Latin word stannum, meaning tin. These curious courts have existed in their present form since the middle of the thirteenth century, and in a simpler form, much earlier; and the miners claim to be free from all other jurisdiction, "except in matters affecting the land, life or limb."

Ethics and Epigrams.
"There's nothing holier in heaven than your own little job," and "The man who fills his little niche on earth in the very best way that it can be filled, is as good as any angel in heaven," are two sayings which sound like different versions of the same epigram of Rev. Robert J. MacAlpine in his address to the Kiwanis club. Whether Pastor MacAlpine said both these things, or only one of them, he put a grand truth in a crisp form. Honest, efficient work is not only a worldly utility but a high moral function.—Buffalo Times.

War Cut Price of Diamonds.
In 1870, during the Franco-Prussian war, the value of diamonds was largely depreciated by the quantity offered for sale in London by French refugees.

First Sleeping Car.
A sleeping car was put into service on the Cumberland Valley railroad (now a part of the Pennsylvania railroad system) in 1836 or 1837, but was abandoned in 1848.

Headache Cure.
A teaspoonful of charcoal powder in half a glass of water, is a cure for sick headache, and relieves heartburn. The powder is difficult to mix with water; it assimilates better with milk, so that the quantity named should be worked to paste with a small quantity of milk; sufficient water to make the draught being added.

Horse That Keeps His Head.
When a horse suddenly finds a sled with four children on it in collision with him, rears up, comes down with one foot well out in front of the children and holds up the other till they scramble into safety, he literally gallops into everybody's heart. That's what a horse did recently in a Massachusetts town.—Our Dumb Animals.

St. John's Writings.
There is satisfactory evidence that St. John, the beloved brother of James and son of Zebdeee, was the author of the Gospel, Epistles and Revelations ascribed to him. The Revelations were written during his exile on the Island of Patmos; the Gospel and Epistles after his return under amnesty to Ephesus, where he was superior of the churches.

Proper Care of Parrots.
Parrots in the wild state live on seed and fruit and should, while in captivity, be fed as nearly as possible the same kind of food. They should be fed sunflower seed, hemp seed, boiled yellow corn, stale bread soaked in water, an occasional piece of apple or banana, roasted peanuts and dry crackers. Plenty of water and gravel should be kept in the cage. The parrot's cage should be cleaned every day.

Figures in the Moon.
Some keenly discerning people see a woman alongside the man in the moon and account for her presence there by her churning on Sunday while the "old gentleman" chopped the wood. A pretty eastern fancy is that the figure in the moon is that of Ina, who weaves the clouds into white cloth and who sent her husband back to earth by the rainbow ridge in order that death might not defile her heavenly home.

Sports, Or Goats?

Are we American people sports, or are we just plain goats? European countries owe the United States ten billions of dollars, loaned to them during the war against Germany.

This money will soon be due, and it is intimated that the allies either can not or will not pay—they intimated the former, but we suspect the latter.

Our friends across the water, it seems, do not want to pay us until after they have collected the money from Germany. And when they do get the money from Germany it is even possible that they will suddenly discover some more urgent and pressing need for it.

Makes a fellow feel fine, doesn't it? Quite sporty, or goat, whichever term pleases you.

Europe tells the United States it is short of sugar—it must have sugar.

We, oo, are short—very short—but we send it to them, hundreds of millions of pounds.

Of course that shoves up the price of what little we are able to buy ourselves. But that doesn't matter to us sports, or goats. We just revel in coughing up lively for the benefit of our dear friends across the water.

Why should we ask Europe to pay us the paltry ten billions of dollars they owe us? Would that the sporty, or goat, be so ungenerous?

Why not give them everything they want, and thank them for taking it? Wouldn't that be quite sporty, or tremendously goat?

Why not be genuine sports, or wholehearted goats, while we are about it?

For isn't it quite jolly to be a sport or supremely comforting to be a goat?

You know!

Aspiration.

An aspiration is a joy forever, a possession as solid as a landed estate, a fortune which we can never exhaust and which gives us year by year a revenue of pleasurable activity.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Jap Children Make Toys.

Japanese children are responsible for a great deal of the cheap toys which are sent from that country to this. The children are rounded up in groups of a dozen or more and they devote nearly all their time to the work for which they receive a few cents a day.

Safety First in Pictures.

The stop, look and listen signs along the Chinese railroads usually consist of pictures showing the dangers of trespassing on the tracks. Inscriptions sometimes accompany the picture, but the inscriptions can be read by comparatively few persons; the pictures can be understood by all.

For Age Computation.

To compute the age and birth month of a person ask the person to think of his age, multiply by 10, add 25, multiply by 10, add the number of the month in which he was born, subtract 250. The first two numerals will be the person's age and the last two the month in which he was born.

How to Rewind a Curtain Spring.

Do you know that when the spring in the window shade is loosened, all you have to do is to pull the shade down its entire length, take it out of the fixtures, roll it up smoothly, put it back in the fixtures, and it will have its original spring? How many wire hairpins have you twisted trying to rewind a curtain spring?

Malady of Doubt.

There are plenty of people who think that to doubt everything shows common sense and shrewdness, whereas it may indicate only a narrowmindedness.

But there is an uneasy doubt of one's self which, if not resisted, may become almost a disease. Often, though perfectly sure that we did lock the door, or deliver an injunction, or put a memorandum in our pocket, we nourish the doubt all day, or turn out our pocket on our way to work.

One symptom of this malady is the hurried, worried search for a missing article in every place save where it usually is, and the astonishment at finding it there.

Duty to posterity.

I would submit to a severe discipline, and to go without many things cheerfully, for the good and happiness of the human race in the future. Each one of us should do something, however small, toward that great end.—Richard Jefferies.

America and England.

The war of independence was virtually a second English civil war. The ruin of the American cause would have been also the ruin of the constitutional cause in England; and a patriotic Englishman may revere the memory of Patrick Henry and George Washington not less justly than the patriotic American.—John Morley, on Burke.

To The Citizens of Lancaster, Ky.

Honorable Mayor, City Council and People of Lancaster, Ky.:

Whereas, the franchise now held by us is void by reason of being in conflict with the State Constitution, and

Whereas, we have no franchise for operating our plant in the City of Lancaster, Ky., because the same is void as aforesaid, the City Council of the City of Lancaster, Ky., and the public generally are hereby notified that we will on August 1st, 1920, or as soon thereafter as practical, move all our poles and electrical equipment from the streets of the city of Lancaster, Ky.

This notice is given as a legal notice, as we understand that reasonable notice must be given before we can remove said property and discontinue said plant.

We are willing to do anything we can to co-operate with the city in securing a franchise for the purpose of furnishing electric light and power to the citizens of the city, but we can not continue it further without expensive additional equipment, and this we can not do at the present rates and without a legal franchise protecting us in our rights.

Done this April 26th, 1920.

Respectfully submitted,

BASTIN BROTHERS,

By H. V. Bastin.

It Would Help.

A forum for the interchange of ideas would be a good thing for this town.

We have many people whose brains are constantly on the alert, who see daily the weak spots in our local life, and who have practical solutions in mind for their improvement.

These people might be brought together, ideas publicly exchanged, and the best plans adopted and put into execution.

There is always some condition in this town that needs improvement, and there is always some one in this town who has a simple and practical method of doing it.

Why drift with the tide when smooth sailing is better?

We have touched on this subject before in our columns. We repeat it now with emphasis.

The delights of summer are surpassingly great, especially when a bull mosquito fastens itself on the back of your neck and refuses to let go.

Why Not This Town?

In all probability Henry Ford has advanced the most practical idea yet for keeping young men on the farms.

Henry suggests that we build factories throughout the farming sections, give these young men employment during the winter months when these is no farm work to be done, and shut them down in the summer when the men are needed on the farms.

It is a sane, sensible and eminently practical suggestion. It is one easy of attainment.

It could be done in this community as well as any other place.

We have the brains necessary to organize, operate and market the products of such a factory. We have the capital required for such a purpose.

What more can we ask?

Nothing—except for our enterprising farmers and townsmen to get together, take the bit in their teeth, and go ahead.

Are we equal to the occasion?

Dotheboys Hall.
"Nicholas Nickleby," one of Dickens' best novels, occurs the name, Dotheboys hall. It is the name of a boarding school in the north of England, kept by a heartless villain named Squeers, a place where boys were taken in and "done for." Squeers' system of tuition consisted of alternately beating and starving. In Dickens' time, it is said, such schools existed, and his account of the one over which Squeers presided did much to bring about their extinction.

Death Rate per 1,000 Population 12.8

In the above you will note a marked decline in the death rate from all preventable diseases, with the exception of diphtheria, for which there has been an increase over 1917 and 1918.

Diphtheria is one of the few diseases for which there is a specific treatment, and if given early enough, and in large enough doses, is a practical specific in almost every case. Increase in the death rate means that physicians are not called early enough, or that they are not taking advantage of the cheaper anti-toxin kept on hand by every County Health Officer in the State and supplied free to the indigent by practically every Fiscal Court in the State.

The Beauty of Woman.

Years ago, when the adults of this town were children, our mothers and our grandmothers and our aunts could hardly be induced to enter a beauty shop or purchase cosmetics from over the drug counter. It was considered vain and frivolous, and subtlety did not approve.

In those days women aged much more rapidly than they do today, and the wrinkles of time were in evidence early in life.

But today it is different, and it is well that it is so.

A man marries a woman because he is attracted to her and forms a lasting affection for her. It is but natural that he should take a pride in her beauty and in the charm of her character, and any harmless means that will aid in retaining either is more than justifiable in its employment.

The woman of the home takes pride in having that home neat and attractive, and spends many hours in adding little touches which she knows are appealing to the man of her choice.

Is there any reason why she should be less particular in preserving her beauty of person than she is in retaining that of the home?

There is today no reason why a normally healthy woman should not retain much of the brightness and bloom of youth even to the brink of the grave. Certainly it is more rejuvenating to her and more pleasing to those who know and love her.

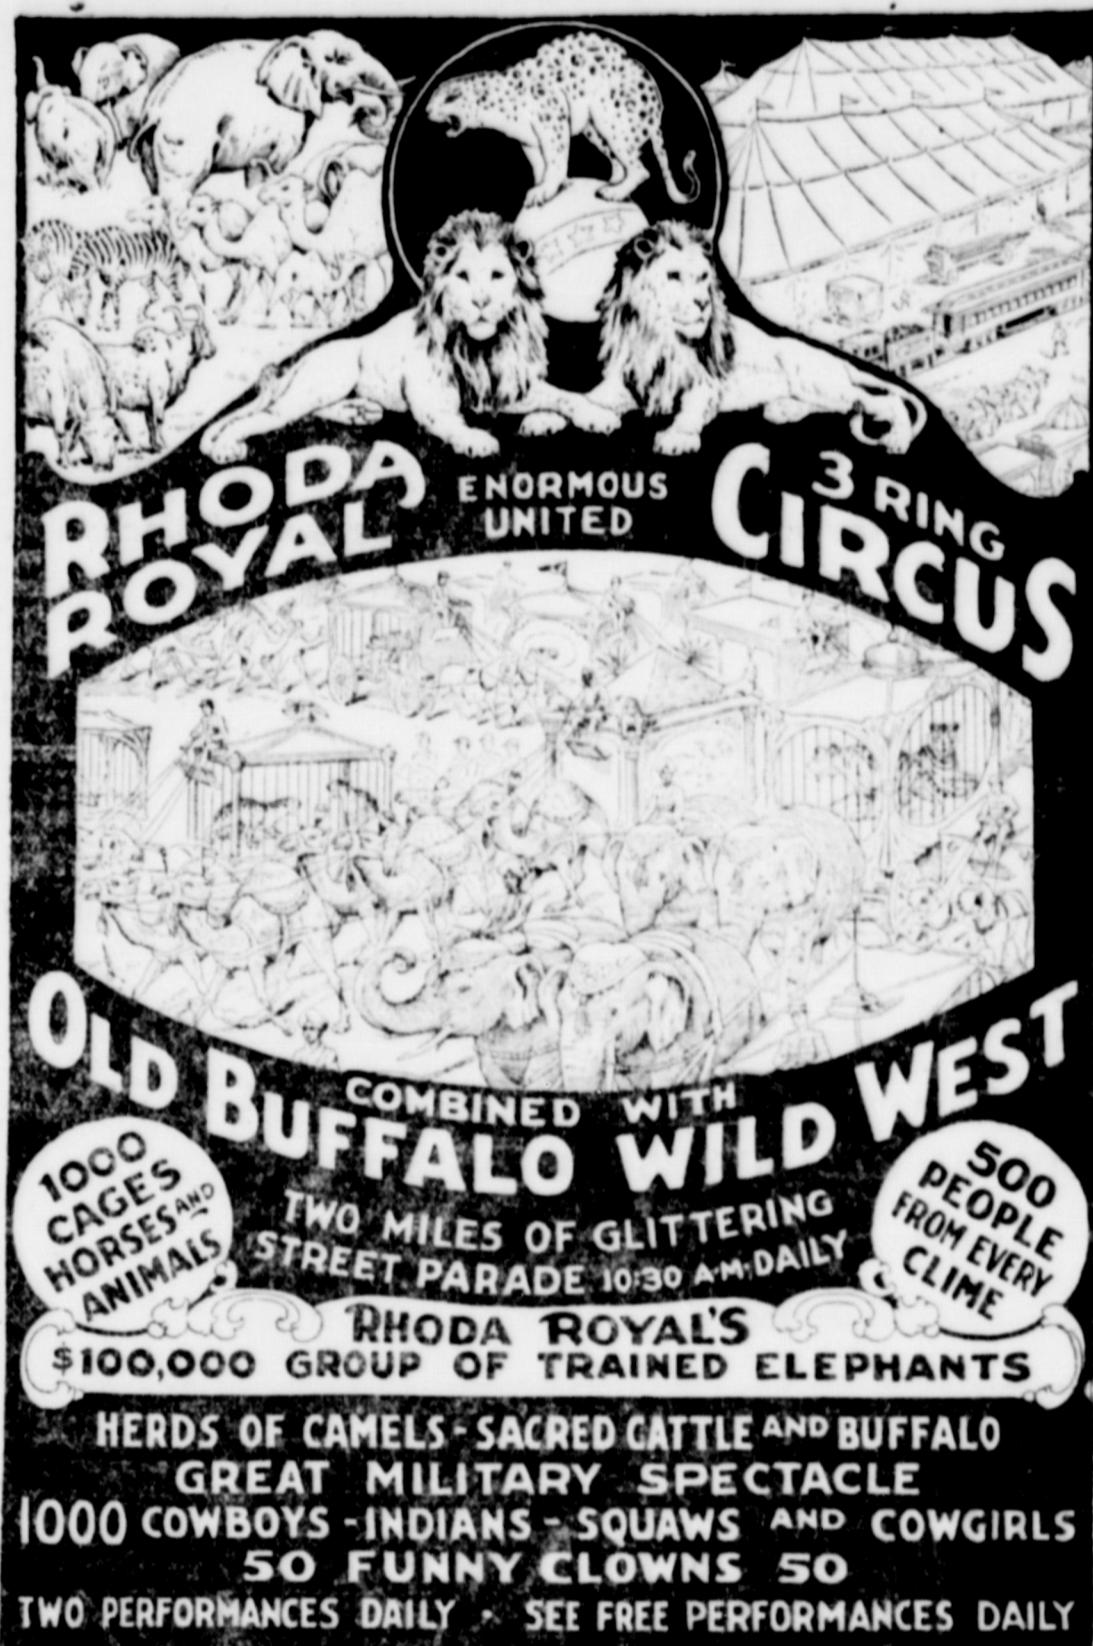

Do not criticize the woman who uses artificial means to retain her beauty of person on a par with that of her soul.

It is possible she is showing evidences of wisdom not possessed by some of her critics, for in the eyes of mankind the preservation of her charm is justifiable in every way.

The Paper Famine.

Paper famine is forcing newspapers and periodicals all over the country to combine, reduce size, raise advertising and subscription rates, or in many cases to go out of business altogether. Numerous Sunday papers now sell at 10 cents or more. The Ladies' Home Journal sends us its new advertising rate card and you may be interested to know what that high-toned monthly charges for its advertising space. The rate is $12 a line or $168 an inch. A full page in colors costs $11,000 and if it is the back cover page it runs up to $15,000. These rates are for one insertion. The Saturday Evening Post is $10 a line, and $10,000 for last cover page. How many pages would you like at these rates?—The Pathfinder.

LANCASTER TUESDAY, JULY 13th

The practice of pulling off a lot of private murders in a presidential year is poor taste and should be suppressed. It diverts the public mind from the few measly thrills still left in our political campaigns.

If you imagine that the penny has ceased to be a thing of value you are in error. It can be used to rub dry mud from clothing, as it has an edge that is not sharp enough to injure the cloth.

ALDRIDGE & MARSEE

BILLIE'S CHANCE

By MILDRED WHITE

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

She was the most wonderful girl he had ever seen! She was "the girl" Billie told himself; all this, as he sat in desperate mood, on his own porch step. All his life he had been waiting for just such a girl, and now that she had come, he could make no progress whatever in winning her, or even in voicing his affection. He raised the gravel wrathfully as he thought of the many opportunities which had heretofore been thrust upon him, for wooing hours. Yes, thrust upon him, Billie reflected, by willing parents. For Billie's bank roll was substantial.

Billie's family, beyond reproach, Billie himself good to look upon and equally "good" to talk to. And now that he was in earnest—deeply, deadly earnest—he was balked in his love-making intention at every turn. Billie felt that he could not survive another day without making love to Connie. He had held his tongue in check just as long as he could.

Connie was too pretty, too altogether charming to be held from him longer. Yet, how he was going to express his feeling for the girl in the presence of her forbidding mother was more than Billie could figure out. Mrs. Webster's frigid proximity alone, he was sure, would freeze the words on his lips, and Mrs. Webster was never absent during Billie's calls at least, from her only daughter's side. Brandon had warned him of this when Billie requested the introduction to Constance.

"I'll never be two's company," Brandon had said, "Mother is always on the job. This mother intends to keep little daughter her willing slave in subjection. Wiser and braver men than you have failed there, Bill."

But still Billie had persisted; to find his friend's warning true. His cleverly planned invitations for drives or theaters had all been accepted in mother's name—mother always went too; this was understood.

Billie confessed to himself that Connie had a remarkable way of conversing with one—in confidence as it were—with her eyes. According to the luminous eyes of Connie, her mother's presence between them, was as great a regret to herself as it was to him.

And according to the twinkly eyes of Connie, she admired immensely his clever, though useless maneuvers, to be rid of that presence. And lately—only very lately—according to the soft and wistful eyes of Connie, she knew an eagerness akin to his own, in wishing to hear the words that he so yearned to speak.

With a gesture of weary despair, Billie arose from the porch step and proceeded "Webster-ward," to fulfill an engagement to take Constance and her mother to a concert. He smiled, comforted, anticipating the girl's nearness during the performance.

If he could be quick enough to push the old lady in the first seat, Connie would sit next to him. But alas! Billie was not quick enough. It was Connie, whom her mother's directing arm, put into the first seat.

So Billie sulked throughout the concert, and Billie further sulked as Mrs. Webster, upon the homeward walk insinuated herself between Connie and herself, a relying arm upon either.

A strong breeze coming up in the early spring night, blew dust in their faces, and Billie felt a savage delight in forcing his charge against the gale. Her skirts buffered her steps, and as Connie hastily withdrew an assisting arm in order to cling to her own hat, Mrs. Webster's new straw turban was merrily lifted by the breeze and carried swiftly off in the darkness. "Catch it Connie," she gasped, and Connie dashed off in pursuit.

Then as Mrs. Webster vainly peered about in the windswept gloom, Billie with a shouted word ran in an opposite direction.

"We will round it up," he promised; but everything which lured as a shadow hat, proved to be no hat at all, and accidentally or purposely, which, I cannot say, Billie and Connie met in the darkness at the end of the Webster lawn behind a Webster tree. And Billie, believing that "it's an ill wind that blows nobody good," proceeded to capture his own good and Connie's slight figure, as well, at the same time.

"No use looking further," Billie mumbled inarticulately, "too dark, too breezy. Hat's gone to Jericho by this time."

"But mother," whispered the girl, "she's coming, I hear her."

"Let her come," answered Billie wickedly, "we are harder to find back here than the hat."

And then Billie told his love story! It was eloquently told—and very well—if shily received.

"Constance!" came a querulous voice. "Oh, Constance! where are you?"

"Mother thought a lot of that hat," the girl said into Billie's coat lapel.

"I really think that you might get a long way into mother's graces, Billie, if you could bring it back in the morning."

"But, darling!" objected Billie, "if I could find that hat, what would it look like in the morning. It's raining now."

"Mother bought the hat at Miss Wollcott's," Connie inquired. "Miss Wollcott would know where to find another like it, Billie."

And that is the very way that Billie made the grand opening for his victory.

With the republican and the democratic candidates both in the field there will be reams printed about their respective virtues and iniquities. Take both the good and the bad of either at a fifty per cent valuation and you will come somewhere near the normal and mental status of the man, for neither party could elect either a saint or a devil president of the United States. The adherents of each party have to much common sense for that.

For once in its life fashionable society in the big cities has done something worthy of general commendation. It has adopted a broad brimmed hat for summer wear which affords ample protection for the eyes in the hot sun. City dames, if they persevere, may in time approach something near to the normal application of brains enjoyed by her sisters of the country towns and the rural districts.

A town in Peru has become so infested with rats the officials have voted to destroy all but six houses in order to get rid of them. That gives us an idea. We might try blowing up the country in order to get rid of the unwelcome bolsheviki, but probably it wouldn't work.

CIRCUS DAY.

The Rhoda Royal The Grandest and Best Shows Almost Here

The all absorbing topic of the day seems to be "are you going to the circus?" The answer on every hand seems to be "why certainly," and when one stops to reflect over the fact that the Rhoda Royal Shows are the largest that ever toured the United States it is surprising that one is going to avail himself of the opportunity to see this massive amusement whether tented or otherwise, has ever caused the preliminary enthusiasm throughout Garrard county that the Rhoda Royal shows have by the announcement that they would appear in Lancaster, Tuesday, July 13th.

In view of the fact that this wonderful zoologic, ethnologic, equine and hippodromic exhibition is the superior of all similar enterprises, employing, as it does, more cars to transport it, more people to conduct its various departments, more horses, wagons, larger tents, and the greatest number of performers ever amassed under one management, it is not surprising that it is to-day the world's representative show.

We suggest to out-of-town people the advisability of coming to town early so as not to miss the grand street parade that takes place daily at 10 a. m., rain or shine. It contains five bands of music, ten kinds of music in all, including the grand golden steam calliope, band of real Scottish bag-pipers, and several musical novelties absolutely new to the American people. There is a whole caravan of massive carved cages, glided chariots, mounted knights and ladies, a score of comical clowns, herds of elephants, camels, midget ponies and the finest collection of highly-herd horses ever brought to this country. After all, the parade is only preliminary to the most remarkable exhibition of ariatic, hippodromic and zoological marvels ever collected by man. Will Exhibit at Bastin field, Lexington Avenue.

THE WILD CAT

IS WILD

It Really Doesn't Matter, As the Untamed Feline Is of No Account anyhow.

In spite of many academic discussions, nobody really cares what makes the wild cat because the wild cat is no good even when he is tame. But it makes all the difference in the world whether useful livestock is trained or wild. The finest colt in the world, product of the best draft stock, is of little use to a farmer unless he has been broken to harness, is bridled wise and tractable.

A cow may be a champion milk producer but she is of comparatively little value if nobody can milk her. A setter may carry the blue blood of Count Gladstone and have a nose for bids that is unequalled but nobody wants to hunt behind him unless he has felt the jerk of the trainers choke line and learned not only to find birds but give his owner an opportunity to bag them.

It is exactly the same way with dollars. The country today is overrun with wild dollars. They are as numerous as the herds of wild horses and buffaloes that used to roam the plains of the west and just about as useful. If you capture them, all you can do with them is lock them up in a cage to keep them from getting out, destroying your financial fences and ramping your garden plots. You cannot even handle them without their getting away or doing you some harm.

But if you tame them and train them by continued and patient and regular investment in safe securities such as Government Savings Stamps, Treasury Savings Certificates or Liberty Bonds at present advantageous market prices you can make them work for you faithfully and well. Investment is the only known method of subduing wild dollars but it must be safe investment. Like every other animal trainer you must have patience and the lesson must be repeated until it is thoroughly learned.

Reasons!

Why you should use Cardui, the woman's tonic, for your troubles, have been shown in thousands of letters from actual users of this medicine, who speak from personal experience. If the results obtained by other women for so many years have been so uniformly good, why not give Cardui a trial?

E-80

A Tractor Farm--145 Acres
FOR J. M. McGRAW, IN LINCOLN COUNTY, AT

AUCTION
Friday, July 23,
AT TEN O'CLOCK,

LOCATION—On Short Pike, 1-8 of a mile from the Danville and Hustonville Pike, 6 miles from Danville, 6 miles from Stanford, 2 miles of Graded School, 2 miles from Q. and C. Railroad, in good neighborhood, yard fronts right on the pike, is a beautiful home and you are sure to like it.

Will be sold in three tracts.

TRACT NO. 1—105 acres, with splendid 7 room two story dwelling, fine stock barn, 4 acre tobacco barn, large double crib, garage, best dairy in the County, other out buildings, all in first class repair; everlasting water, 2 good orchards. In cultivation as follows: 40 acres in corn, 20 acres in wheat sown to clover, 12 acres of oats, 12 acres of meadow, 2½ acres of tobacco, remainder in grass.

TRACT NO. 2.—20 acres, good 3 room house, good orchard, everlasting water, 8 acres in corn, one acre in tobacco, balance in blue grass.

TRACT NO. 3—20 acres, unimproved, all in corn.

Each tract faces on the pike and two or more tracts can be had together to get the size farm you want. This farm produces well and somebody will buy a bargain. We have sold two farms for J. M. McGraw at auction, and he is the kind we like to do business with. Mr. McGraw is like we are, he puts them up, turns them loose and somebody buys a farm.

Don't overlook this one. Spend the week with us. Auction sales every day this week. Possession January 1, 1921, or earlier if the purchaser desires. Will be sold on easy terms.

For further particulars see Mr. McGraw, W. E. Moss or R. H. Dever, at my Danville offices, George Swinebroad or W. A. Dickerson, at my Lancaster offices.

300-ACRES-300

The Farm of Will Matheny at
PUBLIC AUCTION
To The HIGH DOLLAR On WEDNESDAY, JULY 21ST,
AT 10:00 O'CLOCK,

LOCATION—Lincoln county, on the Ottenheim pike, 5 miles south of Stanford, in good neighborhood, close to schools and churches, quarter of mile from L. and N. Railroad Station. It is admitted that Will Matheny is one of the very best farmers in Lincoln County, and the condition of this farm and improvements and everything about the farm proves it. Here is one of the best money makers that we have on our list. Matheny has petted and taken care of the farm and it is ready for the next man to make money on. Fine tobacco land; sugar tree and black walnut. Improvements modern and up to date. 2 story 8 room dwelling, 2 halls and 2 porches, metal roof, electric lights, water works, bath room; a new house with modern equipment. One three room tenant house, one stock barn, one 12 acre tobacco barn, new garage and all other out buildings. Cistern at house and at barn and fine young orchard. 12 acres in tobacco, 26 acres in wheat, 60 acres in corn, 70 acres in blue grass, a lot of it virgin soil, balance in clover and timothy meadow.

About 125 acres will be sold with the improvements, the balance divided into several tracts with good frontage on pike.

There ought to be a "BUNCH" of buyers on this farm as every fellow who sees it will want it, but the other fellow might not be able to get there so you come and secure a bargain. Take our word for it, very few like this one on the market. Will be sold for possession January 1, 1921, with the usual fall seeding privileges and on easy terms.

Remember this land is up and selling to the high dollar. All you have to do is to bid last.

For further particulars see Mr. Matheny on the premises, or W. E. Moss or R. H. Dever at Danville, or W. A. Dickerson or George Swinebroad at my Lancaster office, or

JUST KIDS

By JENNIE LITTLE.

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

As the car swung round the curve and stopped, the motorman almost thought he was seeing double, for beside the white post stood a small boy and girl, as like as two peas in a pod. The conductor, smarting from the sarcastic comments of an old lady whom he had carried past her street, changed his scowl to a grin as he swung them up with a "Well, well, look who's here! Does your mother know you're out?"

"No, 'cause we're visiting Gramma," piped up the feminine portion of the party, who was the acknowledged spokesman in public, for Bobo was the victim of a most unmanly limp.

"As they passed down the aisle of the hot car, the listless or grumpy expression on the other passengers' faces changed as if by magic. They squeezed into a vacant space beside a mother trying vainly to amuse her fretting baby, who promptly stopped his wailing, and with a gurgle of mischief made a pass at Betty's curls.

"How long have you had him?" she asked, with a delightful giggle.

"He had his first birthday last week," smiled the mother.

"Oh, my, hasn't he lasted good?" was the admiring remark, as she cast a most unfavorable look of comparison at the battered features of a doll held tightly under one arm. "I only got Bella last Christmas. We've got a new baby brother home."

Bobs burrowed deep into newly acquired back pockets, the pride of his heart, taking as much time as possible, that none might overlook the existence of said pockets.

"Two marbles," he announced briefly.

Just then a young man stepped on the car, and Betty hailed him as an old friend.

"The twin terrors, as I'm alive!" he exclaimed, his eyes searching eagerly about for a third party. "You're not alone?"

"Yes," said Betty, "but it's all right. It hasn't been a nice day at Gramma's. Aunt Alice cried hard last night when she thought I was asleep, and she hasn't laughed or played with us today. Bobo was bad, and when he upset the milk bottle in the refrigerator, Gramma said, 'Children I'm 'asperated. Go out and amuse yourselves till I call you.' So we started to water the lawn, and how did we know Gramma was coming round the corner just as we turned the hose that way? Then he told us to go straight off the lawn, so we took a walk down the street."

"We stopped to speak to a big mooly-cow looking through the fence, and she blew both her old horns at us. So we thought we'd ride a little way, till it's time for Gramma to want us back."

Poor Jack Barnes was as uncomfortable as a mere man could be under this running fire of explanation, and, red of face, signalled for the next stop.

"You'll go right back now," he said, firmly, and marshalled them off, followed by the delighted smiles of Betty's audience.

"I hope you are not going to be cross, too," said the engaging young sinner. "Guess everybody got out the wrong side of the bed this morning. Why didn't you come to see Aunt Alice last night? Then maybe she wouldn't have cried."

When they reached the gate, three distracted relatives came rushing from as many directions, but Jack turned to the grandparents.

"I found these twinsters having a joy ride on a car, so I made them about-face in case you wanted them."

"The little rebels," cried the old gentleman; "they ought to be spanked for giving us the scare of our lives."

But Grandma thankfully folded them to her heart.

As they went to the house, Jack turned stiffly to the young lady, who, after her first cry of welcome, had not spoken.

"I didn't intend to force myself up on you again, after what happened last night, but I really would like to hear your reasons for letting that cad Hastings take you to the dance after you had promised me. If it was just a way of letting me down easy, why all right, of course."

"Well," answered that young person, coldly, "when I saw you an hour before devoting your time to a beautiful stranger, I certainly didn't think you needed my company, and the roadster will not accommodate three."

"Daylight breaks over me," cried Jack. "My sister arrived on the 5:30, and I was showing her about town a bit, and telling her about the finest girl in the world, who had so often wished to meet her. And you thought—oh, Alice Camden, I guess it's up to you to ask me in to supper and begin where we left off before this big mistake."

That night as the young adventurers were being put to bed, Alice led Jack to the foot of the stairs, where Betty's voice floated down—"and blessed mamma and Daddy, and the new baby, and make Bob a better boy tomorrow." Even a worm will turn, and from the next room came a defiant challenge: "Mind your own bittineth. I can pray for myself!"

There was a pause, fraught with great possibilities, then the prayer was concluded with a voice of Pharisaical sweetness:

"I'm going to be good, anyway, Lord, but you can help me a little if you feel like it!"

"The Chickens Will Come Home To Roost"
I'VE GOT TO PAY MAMA

I bought her entire interest in the JOSEPH MERCANTILE COMPANY, Lancaster, Ky.
Complete reorganization of the Joseph Mercantile Co.
But same will be carried on with the honest business principals of the old concern.

15
Days
ONLY

I have bought out lock, stock and barrel, the entire interest of my mother who now retires from the firm, leaving me entire control of the business. Taking over the entire business, I am confronted with the imperative obligation of paying for what I have bought.

MAMA—and I say it with all reverence—wants her money, as you and I want ours. It is the fruits of her labors, the realization of her life's work that she wants—the wherewithall—to enable her to spend the balance of her days in comfort. It belongs to her, she earned it and she wants it. I have therefore, decided on this means of raising the money—to conduct a sale—a bonifide dissolution sale—that will arouse the people of this and surrounding counties.

And right here good friends, let me remind you and emphasize the fact that we do not hold sales every week. I am not like the Shepherd Boy—There are no false alarms here.

There is a reason for this sale—I admit it and my shoulder is to the wheel.

Come then to the Biggest Merchandise Feast Garrard and Surrounding Counties has ever known.

PUBLIC SPENDING LESS.

U. S. Treasury Department Official Says Public Has Awakened to Necessity of Saving.

According to statements issued by the United States Treasury Department, people are rapidly getting over their postwar extravagance. It is noticeable throughout the retail world, that people are buying with less frequency and greater discrimination. It is to this fact that the economists are ascribing the threatened fall in price, said to be a near certainty. Apparently, the public has only just begun to rouse to the fact that high prices are directly traceable to its own desire to get rid of money, and that they will fall only when the public itself gets tired of paying excessive prices and throwing away good money.

Another indication of the awakening of thrift tendency lies in the increase of Government bonds of low denominations. Banks and brokerages throughout the country are being flooded with inquiries for these bonds and other small stocks of an assured nature—Exchange.

MEXICO WOMEN INTERESTED

They Have Big Meeting

Of Federated Club Members and

Make Special Feature of Thrift.

The Club women of Mexico, Mo., are greatly interested in the Thrift and Savings movement sponsored by the United States Treasury Department.

Last Monday the Federated Women's Club held an unusually interesting session that was presided over by Mrs. William Rufus Jackson, wife of Mexico's postmaster.

Representatives of nearly every woman's club in the central part of Missouri were present. Several numbers were recitations by children, who took their selections from the verse and feature stories appearing in the Savings Herald, a paper published by the Savings Division of the Treasury Department at St. Louis.

Twenty Years Ago.

Nobody swatted a fly.
Nobody had appendicitis.
Nobody wore white shoes.

Cream was five cents a pint.
Cantaloupes were muskmelons.

Milk shake was a favorite drink.
Advertisers did not tell the truth.
Doctors wanted to see your tongue.

The hired girl drew one-fifty a week.

You never heard of a "tin Lizzie."
Farmers came to town for their mail.

Nobody "listened in" on a telephone.

Nobody cared for the price of gasoline.

Herbert Did Not Care.

(New York World.)
Chicago.—Herbert Hoover and his family passed through Chicago recently on their way to the coast.

"I have nothing to say politically," he said. "I shall stop at Tru-kee, Nev., to fish for a month."

"But the outcome of the convention must be of interest to you."

"Absolutely uninterested."

"The Michigan delegation is instructed for you. Is that interesting?"

"It's not a bit interesting. I did not instruct them, did I?" replied the former Food Administrator with a broad smile.

Too Good To Be True.

Cleveland, Ohio.—A stampede was narrowly averted in Lakewood, when "Sugar 6 1/2 cents a pound" appeared on the window of a grocery. The store was jammed and the clerks were nearly swept off their feet.

A mischievous youngster was the cause of it all. When the sign was painted on the window with whitewash, it read: "Sugar 26 1/2 cents a pound." The youthful humorist rubbed out the figure "2."

FOOD RIOTS Becoming More Serious In Germany.

A despatch from Berlin to the New York World, telling of food riots in Germany, says:

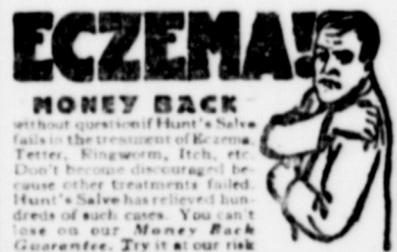

The riots, which started in the industrial town of Osnabrueck, and thence jumped to Bremen, Ulmstadt, Magdeburg and several smaller places, today, broke out in Darmstadt, Magdeburg and several smaller towns, all taking the form of a public protest against the high cost of living by angry buyers, chiefly incensed by high price of fruit. But not stopping there, in many cases the ring-leaders of the mob hold forced bargain sales at what they consider fair reduced prices, though more often the proletarian simply solves the high cost of living problem by plundering.

In some places the riots did not stop at storming and selling out food stores, but cleaned out shoe stores, even department stores. In Geestemueda, near Bremerhaven the crowd captured a local department store and sold shoes priced at 700 marks (normally $161) for 30 to 50 marks (normally $6.60 and $11.50), and suits at 50 marks. The high cost of living situation, in taking the form of riots, is further aggravated by the popular irritation over the newest tax provision which has just become effective, requiring that 10 per cent be deducted by employers from all wages and salaries and paid into the state's coffers on account of the income tax.

There is serious talk of tax riots in Berlin next week. Every wage earner is sore, but the organized workers, particularly the radicals, are rabid in various parts of Germany, and riotous tax protests are predicted.

VICTORY MEDALS

Being Distributed.

All Who Served In War Will Receive Decoration.

(Elizabethtown News.)

The Victor Medal, which is to be issued to every soldier, sailor, marine, field clerk, or nurse who served honorably for any period from April 6, 1917, to November 11, 1918, are being distributed. Executed in a toned bronze, the medal was designed by the celebrated American sculptor, James Earle Fraser, of New York, under the supervision of the Commission of Fine Arts. In addition to the medal there have been designed thirteen combat or major operation clasps, and a defensive sector clasp which go on the ribbon with the medal and also five overseas service clasps for troops not entitled to battle clasps.

Statistics compiled since the armistice disclosed that 4,765,000 men and women are eligible for the award which will be made thru the Adjutant General of the Army.

To obtain medals it is necessary for every applicant to follow these instructions:

All officers and men desiring the medal will get in touch with the nearest recruiting officer or with the commanding officer of the nearest army post, camp or station.

Officers in charge at these various places will determine after examination of discharge papers the class of medal and the number of battle clasps to which the applicant is entitled or forward the application to the Adjutant General for further information if not properly supported.

The original discharge papers will then be handed back to the man and the depot officer of the Quartermaster Corps, Philadelphia, Pa., ordered to ship the medal direct to the recipient.

Should an applicant not live in a town where there is a post, camp or recruiting station, he should apply by mail to the nearest post or camp for necessary forms. If his discharge papers or other records do not substantiate his claims for battle clasps or other additional decorations, they should be forwarded to the Adjutant General of the Army, where a search of the records of his organization will be made and the exact medal and battle clasps determined.

Nurses will apply to the surgeon general's office direct.

A Favorable Sign In Kentucky.

The election of Joseph E. Boggs, the present State Highway Commissioner, as State Engineer, is one of the best things that has happened recently in Kentucky. He was chosen by the State Commissioners appointed by Governor Morrow in spite of the fact that Mr. Boggs is a Democrat. The Bi-partisan Commission very wisely decided that politics should not enter into road building in Kentucky and that only ability and fitness should have any weight in the selection of the State Engineer. Mr. Boggs has proven his thorough competency. Any other man would have been an experiment. Mr. Boggs is in touch, not only with the entire road situation in Kentucky, but also with the people. Any new man selected would have taken a year to get where Mr. Boggs is now, even if he had the same degree of competency. If Mr. Boggs had been a Republican we would have favored his election because he has proven himself a thoroughly competent engineer.

Roads and schools are the two things which must mark the progress and advancement of Kentucky, and the injection of politics into either of them would be a baleful and injurious influence. The News congratulates the State Commission upon the selection of Mr. Boggs, as they have by this act started out with the confidence and the respect of the people.—Elizabethtown News.

Make Your Home
a Cheerful Home

You can't expect folks to be happy and contented where the home is in half-darkness and permeated by the smell of smoky lamps. Every member of your family is entitled to all the bright electric light which city folks have. If somebody asked you to buy an expensive plant that simply furnished light and no more, you might have some good arguments against such a purchase, but when you think of a lighting plant that is also a plant capable of operating any and every small machine on your place, that is another matter.

Genco Light

is such a plant. In addition to being a perfect electric lighting plant, it has a pulley by which machines can be run while charging your batteries. When this is done, your lights cost practically nothing. Genco Light is such a positive labor saver that owners figure that this power practically takes the place of farm help. It certainly does enable the help to do more; or less help to do the same work. Genco Light is not a luxury—it is a servant that will increase production and pay for itself in actual dollars and cents. You really owe it to yourself to call here with your wife and see this wonderful plant at work. May we expect you?

PALATABLE AND WHOLESOME POTATO REAL
STANDBY OF HOUSEWIFE WHO ECONOMIZES

Irish Potatoes Are Easy to Prepare and in Season All the Year.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The explorer, whoever he was, who introduced the potato to the civilized world, deserves even at this late date a rising vote of thanks from all those who are trying to serve three square meals a day to their families and not go bankrupt. Potatoes are high, in comparison with other days, but not as high as meat. The potato is not a substitute for meat because starch and not protein is its main substance, yet it is a food which possesses much nourishment and is palatable, wholesome, and "filling." Where economy or health makes it necessary to reduce the amount of meat eaten, potatoes can well be used to form the base of the main dish served at a meal.

In the following recipes, which have been tried out in the home-economics kitchen of the United States department of agriculture, potatoes either help to make a little meat go a long way or else form the base of a palatable dish which contains no meat.

Potatoes With Cheese and Green Pepper.

2 cups diced cooked potatoes 1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon flour 1 green pepper
1 tablespoon fat cooked and chopped
1/2 cup milk 1/2 cup grated American cheese
1/2 teaspoon salt 1/2 cup bread crumbs
Make the sauce, using the fat, flour, milk, and seasoning. Mix the potato and the green pepper with the white sauce and cheese. Put in a baking dish and cover with the bread crumbs and brown in a hot oven.

Canned red pepper or pimento can be used in place of the green pepper.

Potato Souffle.

2 tablespoons fat 1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons potatoes 1/2 teaspoon pepper starch or flour 1/2 teaspoon celery
2-3 cup milk or water salt
1/2 cup rice or potato juice
1/2 egg yolks, well beaten
1/2 egg whites, beaten
butter

Mix ingredients in order given and bake until firm in a greased, covered baking dish in slow oven. This quantity serves five persons.

Potato Omelet.

1/2 cup mashed potato 3 tablespoons cream
1/2 cup milk or milk
1/2 teaspoon pepper 1/2 teaspoon salt
3 eggs

Wash eggs, and separate the whites and yolks. Add the yolks to the potatoes and beat until there are no lumps. Season with onion juice, if desired, and chopped parsley. Beat the whites until stiff and fold into the potato mixture. Put into a well-greased frying pan and bake in oven until brown. Then turn and fold on hot platter. Serve at once.

Potato and Cheese Molds.

2 cups mashed potato 2 tablespoons fat
1/2 cup milk 1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup grated cheese 1/2 teaspoon salt

Melt fat in saucepan, add potatoes, and mix well; then add the milk and half the cheese and seasoning. Put into a greased baking dish, small ramekins, or baking cups, sprinkle the rest of the cheese on top and bake in a fairly quick oven about ten minutes.

Potato and Egg Mold.

2 cups mashed potato 1 cup egg sauce
1/2 cup milk

Mix the potatoes with the egg sauce and season. Put in baking dish or baking cups and bake until lightly browned. The egg sauce is made as follows:

Make a cream sauce by mixing the potato starch with the melted fat, combining with the milk, and cooking until thickened. Add the finely chopped egg. If potato starch is not available cornstarch may be used instead.

Potato Thistle.

1 cup milk Salt
1/2 cup mashed potato Pepper
1/2 cup flour to starch 1 hard-boiled egg
1/2 cup fat

Line a dish around the sides with mashed potatoes, prepared as for the table, then fill with minced lamb or veal or other left-over meat, well seasoned; cover over top with mashed potatoes, and criss cross with a knife. Put in oven and brown. Left-over meat and potatoes can be used.

Potato and Nut Sausage.

2 cups mashed potato 1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 cup flour 1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup milk or water salt
1/2 cup rice or potato juice
1/2 egg well beaten
1/2 cup salt pork

To the mashed potatoes add enough milk to bind them. Put nuts in boiling water to loosen skins, remove skins, and put nuts through meat grinder. Mix nuts and potatoes thoroughly and season well. Add well-beaten eggs to potato mixture. Form into sausages, flour them well, put into greased pan, and put a small piece of salt pork on top of each sausage. Bake in a fairly hot oven until brown (about 45 minutes). Serve with tomato sauce.

MANY OPPORTUNITIES TO EARN MUCH MONEY

Home Industries, Peculiar to Locality, Are Encouraged.

Young Texas Girl Engaged by New York Business Man to Prepare Fig
Preserves for Eastern Market
—Work in Other Lines.

Many opportunities for making money come to girls who belong to the clubs organized by the United States department of agriculture and the state agriculture colleges. Home industries, which are peculiar to their locality or particularly adapted to it, are especially encouraged. In some sections of the South where long pine needles and grapefruit abound the girls make attractive baskets from the pine needles and fill them with candied grapefruit peel, jars of grapefruit marmalade, or some other native sweet, and sell them in the winter to tourists.

Harris county, Texas, produces figs. A club girl who lives there learned, through her club, how to make delicious fig preserves. Last November a New York business man, desiring to secure a superior fig preserve to put on the market, went to the demonstration agent of Harris county and asked if she had in her clubs some one competent and willing to do such work. The extension worker knew of several, but the girl who excelled the rest in the art was young—too young, she feared, to carry on so large an undertaking. She was so well qualified, however, in every other way, that the man decided to have an interview with her. The sight and taste of her delicious preserves decided the question and the girl was engaged.

A market for these fig preserves is now being built up in New York on the strength of the samples that could be put up at so late a date.

PLAN TO SAVE WOMAN'S TIME

Proper Height of Kitchen Sink and Work Tables Are Important
Factors in Cooking.

The height of a woman's kitchen sink and work tables are important factors in her well-being and well-doing. She can't do as much or as good work and feel well and strong with her sink and table so low that she has to bend over to work or so high that she has to "reach up," as she would were they the proper height.

As a general rule, 32 to 36 inches from the floor is the height for general work tables and the bottom of the sink should usually be 30 to 31 inches from the floor, the home economics kitchen of the United States department of agriculture suggests. However, each woman ought to find out for herself the height of the table at which she can work most easily and efficiently, and see that her work tables and sink are adjusted accordingly. Legs which are too long can be cut off, and those too short can be raised by blocks under them.

MOLLIE'S BURGLAR

By JACK LAWTON.

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

Mollie sat looking ruefully over the moonlit garden, as she braided her hair for the night. Just one month ago all had been "love and roses." At least that had been Mollie's roseate vision of life. And tonight! Shadows and darkness seemed everywhere, like the shaded corners of the garden. And all because of Douglas. What a vast difference "the man" can make in one's life.

Douglas had come, and seen, and conquered—as far as Mollie was concerned. She met him in her home city at a party given by the son of his employer.

Douglas was a favorite with his employer; Douglas was, it seemed, a favorite with everybody. So it was not strange that even little, elusive Mollie should capitulate to his charm. His wooing was prompt and successful.

Mother admired Douglas. Father thought well of him. Mollie's betrothal was a time of jubilation. And then—Douglas urged this visit to mother. He was very fond of his tender little mother, Mollie knew, and anxious that she in turn, should become fond of the girl chosen of his heart. So Mollie went with Douglas, out on an afternoon train to a dear old, quiet old house, in the country.

Gorgeous flowers framed the doorways, and inside there were mysterious halls, with steps descending unexpectedly here and there. Mollie's room led from a branching upstairs hall; at the opposite end was the room Douglas had occupied in his childhood, and which was kept unchanged for his frequent visits. Three steps to the right was Faithful's room—and Faithful was the girl who had, innocently enough, brought this new headache to Mollie. Douglas' mother had introduced Faith laughingly, that first day of Mollie's arrival, as an old sweetheart of his. And though Douglas later painstakingly explained that the sweetheart had been a joke of pinocchio days, the insinuation rankled. Jealousy, heretofore an unknown experience with the carefree Mollie, held her now baffled in its power. For while Mollie in secret derided herself for her foolishness, and made firm resolve to pay no attention to the comradeship of Faith and Douglas—no sooner did she come upon the two talking together than Mollie immediately became frigid in demeanor toward her lover, inflicting upon him perplexing hours of unhappiness.

This unfortunate state of affairs had culminated in the present quarrel. Hotly had the now tempestuous Mollie accused her fiance of unfaithfulness, while he, suffering under this injustice, had taken back silently his ring.

Pride raised between these two an insurmountable barrier. As Mollie turned from the window, she noticed beneath it a man's moving figure and recognized the shuffling outline as a "tramp" whom Douglas' mother had helped on his way with a warm supper.

People were almost too trusting in the country, Mollie thought, as her weary head pressed the pillow. It was in the dead of night that she sat up suddenly in bed, every nerve tremble at the strangeness of her waking. The stealthy sound which had roused her came from the direction of the clothes closet, whose small window opened on a sloping roof. And as Mollie watched, plainly discernible in the moonlight, the white knob of the closet door moved slowly, then was still. She had locked her bedroom door before retiring, and as Mollie stared fascinated, the closet door handle turned again, this time distinctly. With one bound the girl sprang to the door and turned the key. Then, with her heart pounding, Mollie sank to the floor. It was the skulking tramp, she was sure, who had sought entrance through the roof window. When she could summon her shaking voice, Mollie asked weakly, "Who is there?"

The twice repeated question was answered merely by a renewed and now aggressive rattling of the door handle. The man would force the door presently in defiant strength, she feared. Wildly she reached for an enveloping kimono. Mollie's cold little feet found her slippers, then she opened the bedroom door, and fled straight to that other door at the opposite end of the hall.

"Douglas!" she sobbed. "Oh, Douglas!"

"Coming," he answered with remarkable promptness, and in a few moments, still struggling into his coat, Douglas was at her side.

"Burglars!" Mollie gasped—"in my closet."

"Go down to mother," Douglas commanded her as he ran.

But Mollie waited, huddled in the wide, rose kimono just where Douglas had left her. And when after what seemed hours to Mollie he found her there, Douglas gathered the trembling form close in his arms, while Mollie clung to him in a most reassuring manner.

"It was," Douglas explained, "the cat, Mollie. She had got shut up in your closet; she always works a door handle that way with her paws, when she wants to get out. I am going to buy that cat a collar." Douglas went on jubilantly, "for sending you back to me."

"Blessed excuse!" murmured Mollie; triumphantly she smiled her relief.
